Two very lazy men lived jointly in a room.

By chance on one winter night the room somehow caught fire.

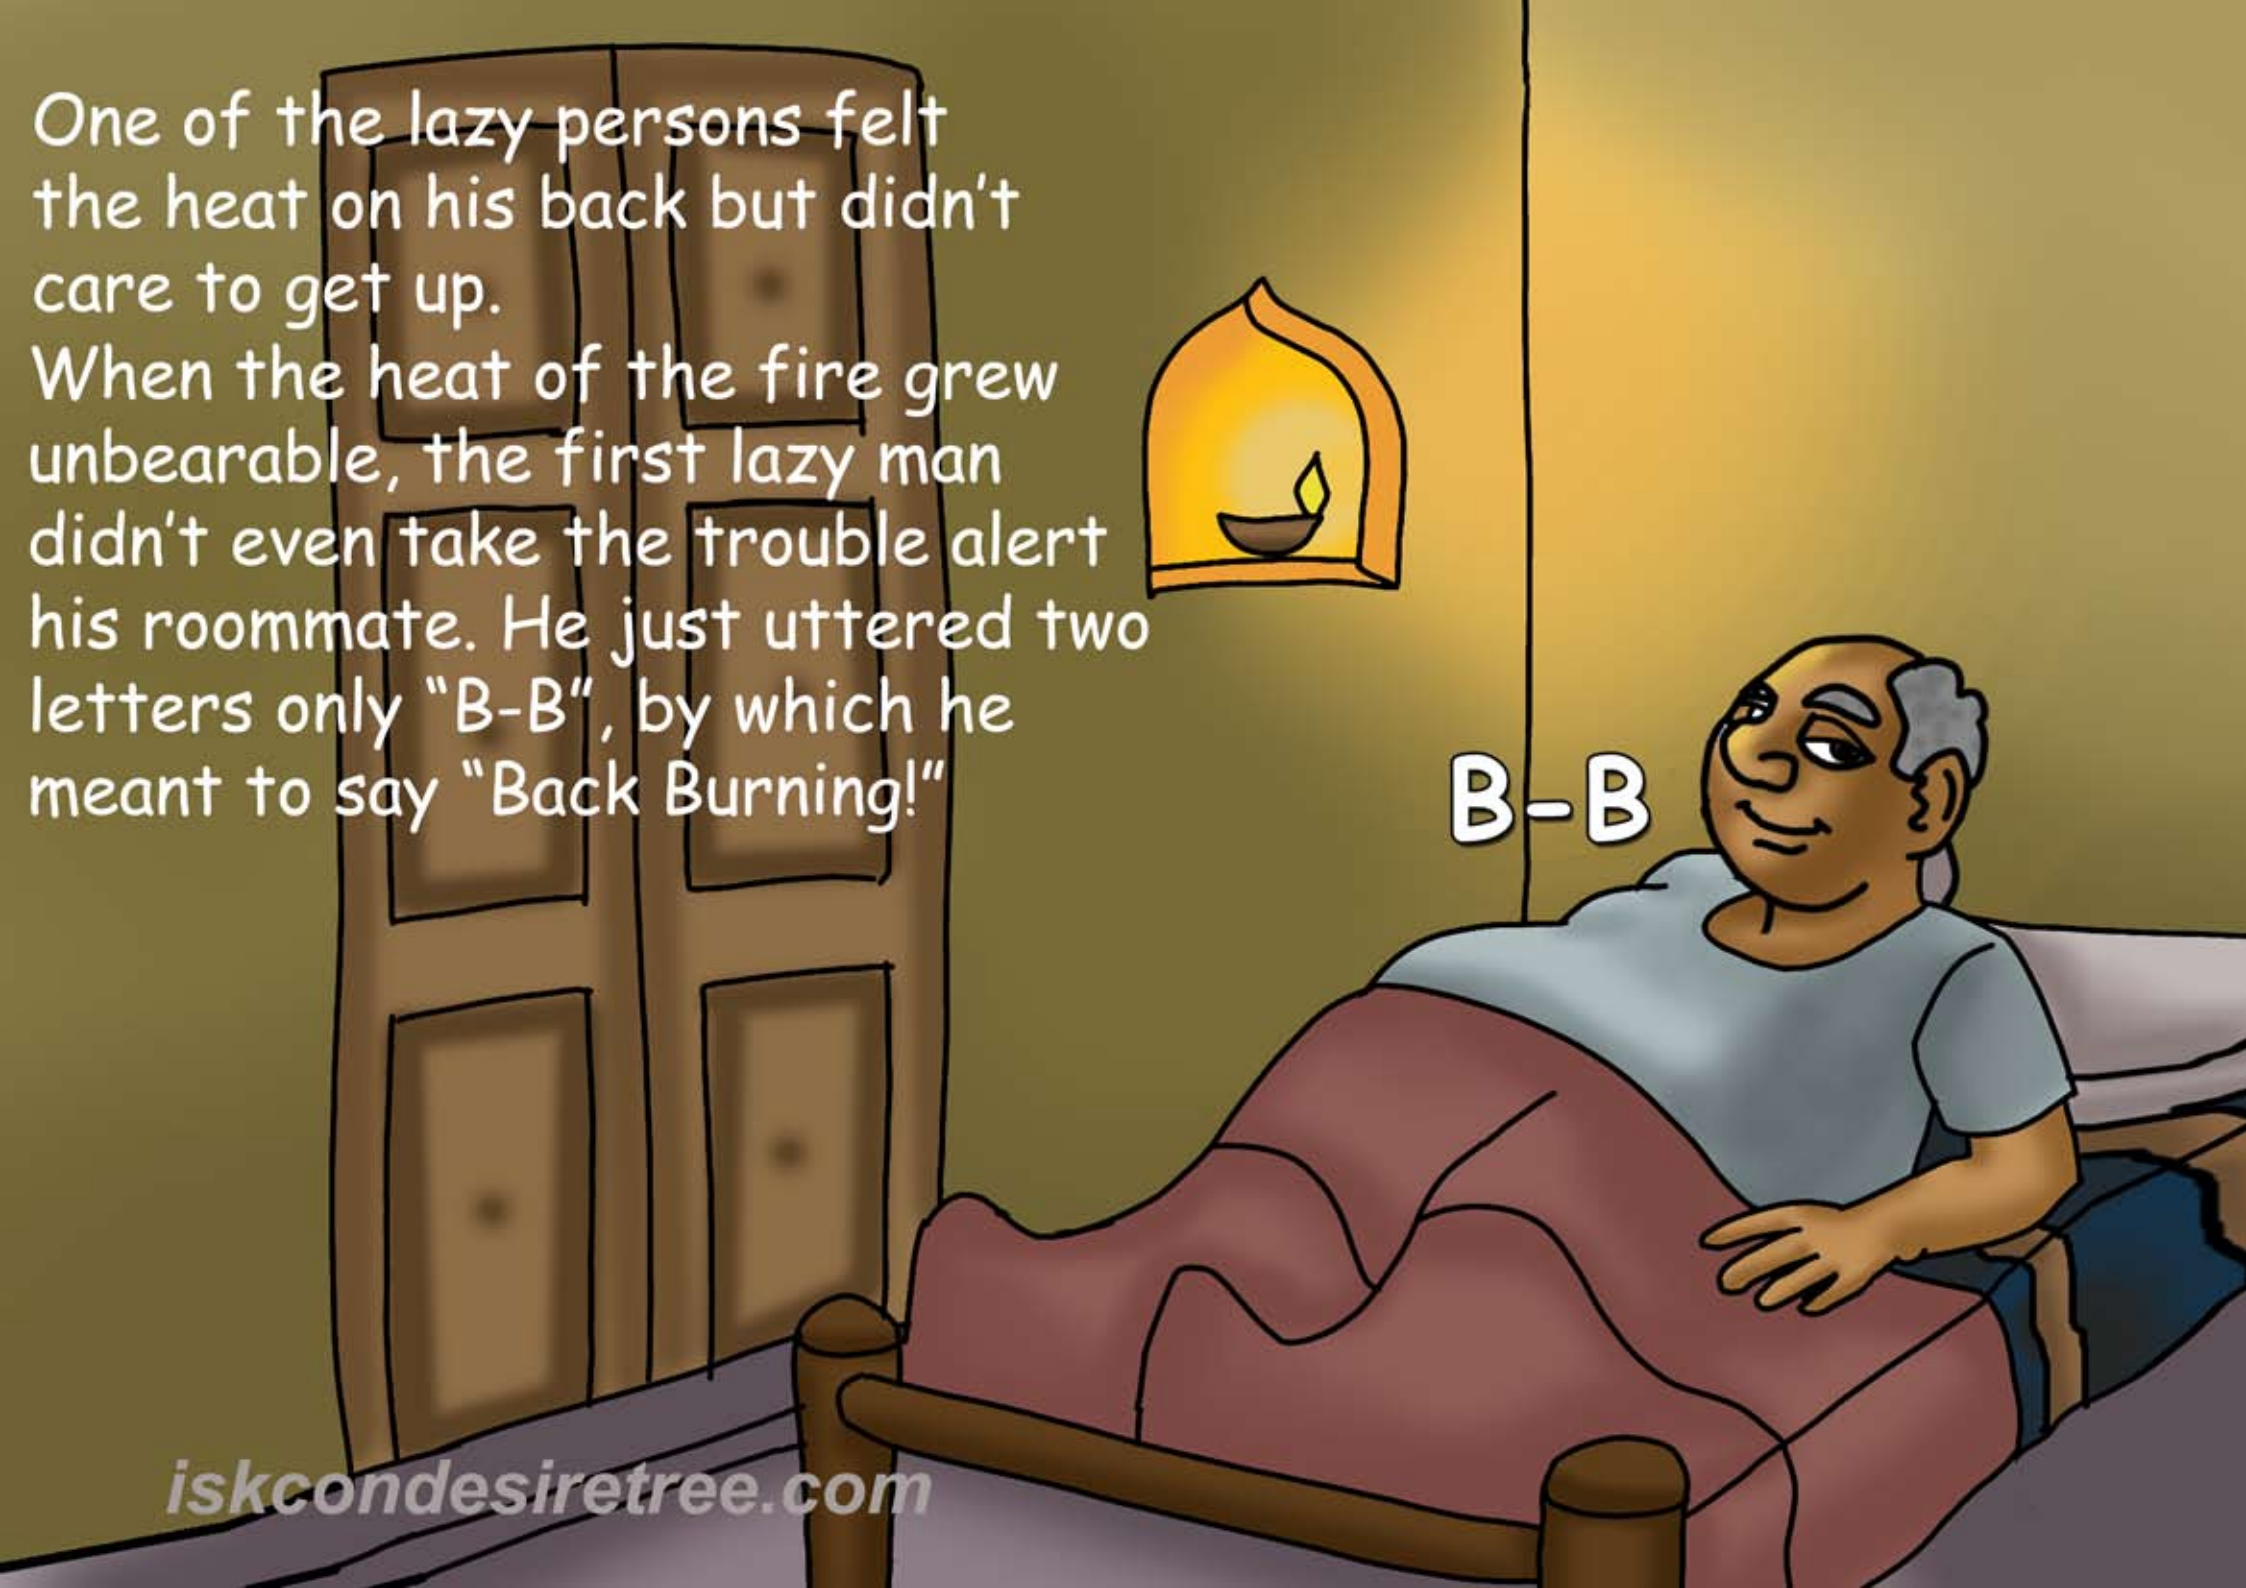

The fire was spreading slowly...

One of the lazy persons felt the heat on his back but didn't care to get up. When the heat of the fire grew unbearable, the first lazy man didn't even take the trouble alert his roommate. He just uttered two letters only "B-B", by which he meant to say "Back Burning!"

B-B

The second lazy man was also similarly lazy he just uttered two letters "M-A" out of sheer laziness, meaning to advice his friend to "Move Aside"

M-A

All this time the fire was getting bigger and bigger

Oh how nice, we are feeling the warmth
of sunshine!

O brother could
you please
check how hot
the sun is?

who wants to take so much of trouble?

How can I open
my eyes?

As they were lazily passing the time in this way, both of them were roasted in the raging fire.

PURPORT :

Those who pretend to be residents of the asrama for the sake of practising service to Lord Sri Hari, but who became lazy in offering daily service to the Lord, the spiritual master, and the Vaishnavas, are also susceptible to be caught within the clutches of illusion and ultimately to meet with a similar end.

The lifestyle of one who has devoted himself to the service of the Lord should never be at any time lazy.
