

Open the Door to Allow the Light in your room

Instructive Stories from teachings of Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati Thakur

A boy from a wealthy family was spoiled through over-indulgence. His parents used to fulfil all his fanciful desires and thus they did great harm to the boy.

One day he was sleeping in a bed room with all the doors and windows closed.

Next day in the morning
the father thought...

It is morning. My dear son might have worked very hard yesterday
night and he wants to sleep
some more time.
Let him take rest.
Once he is fresh
he will get up.

When midday was arriving, the Father became deeply anxious

*What happened to my son? Why he is still sleeping?
Let me knock the door and wake
him up.*

My dear son, please get up. The sun is up and its midday.

Knock Knock

Why are you knocking at my door in the dead of night father? I am not going to open it. You must have come with some bad motive.

The sun has been up for a long time. It is almost midday. Please open the door.

A woman with dark, curly hair and large yellow hoop earrings is shown from the chest up. She is wearing a green top with a patterned sleeve. Her expression is thoughtful or slightly concerned. The background is a mix of purple and blue tones with dark, swirling patterns.

The sun has not entered my room
and its dark here

Please open the window and allow the sun rays to enter.
Than you will know its so bright as its midday.

The midday sun is very strong If its midday than let the sun by its own great strength enter the room !

Will you open the door
so that the sunlight will get into the room?

Let the sun open the doors and windows of my room and enter. I shall than wake up!

PURPORT

Some people think that it is nothing but flattery to say that the Lord is all merciful. If the Lord was really merciful, how is it that there is so much suffering in the world? Some people even think that if Godhead was omnipotent, He should have changed our motives without effort. Their argument is similar to such a spoilt child. They have, in fact, encaged themselves in their own apparently cosy comfortable bedroom under illusionary energy.

The sun distributes his light everywhere indiscriminately, for rich and poor, palace and cottage alike. Anyone who takes the trouble of opening his doors and windows will surely get sunlight. The Lord has also bestowed his mercy everywhere and every living entity, using his freewill, can enjoy it.
