

THE JUDGE'S TIFFIN BREAK

It was 1914. World War 1 was in progress

There was an English high court judge having his lunch along with an Indian judge.

The situation has become very worrisome.

What is it?

Now the Germans are coming.
What are you going to do?

We shall offer our respects to them and invite them to do as they will.

This answer startled the Englishman.

What are you saying?
The German will invade your country and you are not worried? What kind of slave mentality is this?

Why do you want to give in to the Germans so easily?

Give in to invaders?

One should be proud of his country and fight the invaders, one should never allow the invaders to attack. You should be proud and be brave and fight and not have slave like mentality.

Indian judge answered to the Englishman.....

Our business is to receive.
You have trained us as servants.

Its you who have taught us to be slaves and work as servants of the invaders.

MORAL :

The teachers of bhagvad gita should always teach the principles as it is and not keep changing as per circumstances.